HOLY TRINITY SLOANE SQUARE

London Concert Choir returns to Holy Trinity, Sloane Square, John Betjeman's "cathedral of the Arts and Crafts movement", for its seasonal concert of carols for choir and audience. The church's richly decorated interior, generous acoustic and candlelit colour make a natural setting for Christmas music: a place in which familiar words take on a particular warmth for an uplifting celebration of the season.

Under Music Director Mark Forkgen the choir offers a mixture of well-loved Christmas hymns and less familiar seasonal music, old and new. As always, the audience is invited to join the choir in singing some of the best known Christmas carols and hymns.

London Concert Choir is known for the range of its repertoire, from sacred works to opera and musical theatre, and the musical versatility and commitment it brings to performances of that repertoire. Joined by its Principal Accompanist Martyn Noble, the choir will showcase that range in this concert of seasonal music.
